Chapters From Modern Psychology

By JAMES ROWLAND ANGELL, Head of the Department of Psychology in the University of Chicago. 8vo. Pp. viii + 308, $1.35 net, by mail, $1.48.

CONTENTS:—I. General Psychology—II. Physiological Psychology—III. Experimental Psychology—IV. Abnormal Psychology—V. Individual and Applied Psychology—VI. Social and Racial Psychology—VII. Animal Psychology—VIII. General Genetic Psychology and Retrospect—Appendix—Bibliography.

This book affords a bird's-eye view of the field of modern psychology. It presents in simple and intelligible form the salient features of each of the important divisions of psychological science. Among the various topics discussed are the methods and results of experimental psychology, the facts and theories of the connection between mind and brain, the vagaries of abnormal consciousness, including hypnosis and multiple personality, the peculiarities of social consciousness, the phenomena of animal mind, and certain aspects of the application of psychology to practical affairs. A brief but useful bibliography enables the interested reader to pursue further any of the subjects treated.
